Introduction

The success of any organisation depends upon its employees. In sustaining the market share, every organisation has a big responsibility of keeping its workforce satisfied. Employees of the day expect not a mere decent living but also a satisfied life. Personal satisfaction in the life of an employee does depend upon the satisfaction he/she gets in his/her job. A worker in stress cannot perform well in the job. The employees in the banks serve better their customers and attract further more customers towards their bank and make it competitive in the market. It is a known fact that the satisfied employees positively perform better in their job and add more and more customers towards their bank. Such employees are the real asset to the bank.

Now banks are established in every nook and cranny of the country. Similarly, without any holidays and break hours banks have started to function. In achieving efficiency and attaining higher productivity the banks modernized their services with modern devices like computers and other gadgets. The services like net banking, e-banking and financial networking have been widened to cover even the small banks. Thus in modern days the competition among banks in providing banking services has become so keen and acute. The regular banking hours were extended upto 4 p.m. (earlier it was 10-2.00 p.m.). Now because of such a work pressure every worker is under a strain to work from 10 a.m. to 5.45 p.m. with half an hour lunch break. Similarly, no extra remuneration in the name of overtime salary or bonus is allowed. The retirement scheme was introduced in the bank with attractive monetary package to facilitate reduction in the employees in these sectors.

Interpretation

From the above Table, it is found that employees job satisfaction differs by their age with respect to employee job satisfaction indicators on influencing factors ($F=9.427$, $P=0.000$) compensations ($F=7.837$, $P=0.000$) working environments ($F=4.368$, $P=0.002$) promotion ($F=5.454$, $P=0.000$) remedial measures ($F=9.634$, $P=0.000$) are statistically significant at 5% level. This leads to the mean wise comparison of employee's job satisfaction indicators and age of the employees.

It is found that age above 40 years has the highest mean for all the indicators of job satisfaction. Hence, it may be concluded that the respondents who are above 40 years of age are more influenced by the indicators of job satisfaction.

Conclusion

The study was conducted in Indian Overseas Bank in Vellore city. The purpose of this study is to analyse the employee's job satisfaction in the Banking sector. Employee's job satisfaction can improve service quality and increase brand image. Hence, this research was mainly undertaken to investigate on the significant factors such as working conditions, pay and promotion, relationship with co-workers and supervisors in affecting the job satisfaction. The organizational performance and job satisfaction can all be increased if the employees are paid good salaries. Working conditions have also proven to be a strong influence in the job satisfaction of the employees.

Suggestion

Training and development programmes must be provided to the employees at regular intervals to update their knowledge and skills. The kind of work given to an employee should be according to his/her abilities and knowledge and their efforts for doing a particular task must be valued by appreciating and giving rewards to the employees for their hard work so that their level of motivation increases. The job should be interesting enough, so that it creates enthusiasm among the employees. Enough freedom must be given to the employees to take important decisions.

Recommendation

- Sometimes overbearing bosses are the reason for dissatisfaction.
- Employees should give their best and should try hard for the job.
- Working hours should be appropriate.
- Management should maintain healthy competition among employees.
- Performance appraisal system is good to motivate employees.
